

WHAT MAKES THE ACT LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY UNIQUE?

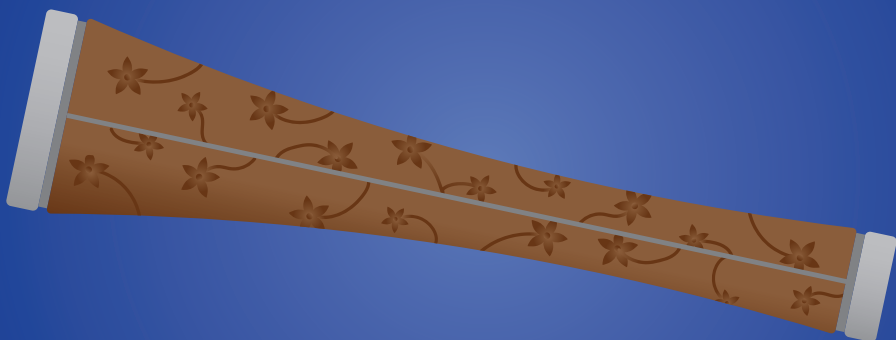

The Assembly is one of only two self-governing parliaments in all of Australia's ten territories

Unlike every other state and territory, the Assembly votes to elect the Chief Minister after an election

There is no governor to sign bills into law in the ACT. New laws are notified on a website

Our mace is made of timber and steel rather than gold and lacks the traditional royal symbols

The Assembly is the only Australian parliament which combines both the state and local levels of government
