I very rarely approach Northbourne Avenue from Vernon circle however caring for an unwell friend caused me to use this route over the past recent months I have lived in Canberra for over 9 years and approached this route at my normal speed At no point did I note the speed signs had changed nor was their any indication that the speed limits had changed. I only became aware of this change when advised by a friend and then reading in the paper.
Since receiving several fines, I have become more observant but w=even when being diligent and observing the fines, I have continuously find difficult as the signage is hidden amongst an abundance of other signage, signage litter is the best way to describe this.
Road works, no turns, pedestrians, lights no name a few .
Clean it up, make it obvious, alert of change speed that is not a dim , low light , temporary, trailer on the side of the road, well after the change In speed.
